

German Expertise in the Americas: John Smith's Description of the Jamestown Colony in Virginia (1612)

Abstract

This source is part of a compilation of texts in which John Smith (1580–1631) and his fellow colonists described the initial years of the Jamestown Colony in Virginia, the first permanent English settlement in the Americas. The texts, composed between 1607 and 1608 and published in Oxford in 1612, describe the settlers' various activities, including their explorations of their environs and the construction and the maintenance of their fort. In this excerpt, we learn that “Poles and Dutch” were involved in crucial artisanal work associated with metals, specifically copper. “Dutch” in this context refers to Germans, a typical conflation in early American writing, often stemming from “Deutsch.” The description points to the global reach of German experts and their importance in establishing European settlements.

The Proceedings of the English Colonie in Virginia

[...] whole company every Saturday exercised in a fielde prepared for that purpose; the boates trimmed for trade which in their journey encountred the second supply, that brought them back to discover the country of Monscan, how, or why, Captaine Newport obtained such a private commission as not to returne without a lumpe of gold, a certainty of the south-sea or one of the lost company of Sr. Walter Rawley I know not nor why he brought such a 5 pieced barge, not to beare us to that south sea, till we had borne her over the mountains, which how farre they extend is yet unknowne as for the coronation of Powhatan & his presents of Bason, Ewer, Bed, Clothes, and such costly novelties, they had bin much better well spared, then so ill spent. For we had his favour much better, onlie for a poore peece of Copper, till this stately kinde of solliciting made him so much overvalue himselfe, that he respected us as much as nothing at all; as for the hiring of the Poles and Dutch to make pitch and tarre, glasse, milles, and sope-ashes, was most necessarie and well. But to send them and seaventy more without victuall to worke, was not so well considered; yet this could not have hurt us had they bin 200. (though the we were 130 that wanted for our selves.) For we had the Salvages in that Decorum, (their harvest being newly gathered) that we feared not to get victuall sufficient had we bin 500. Now was there no way to make us miserable but to neglect that time to make our provision, whilst it was to be had; the which was done to perfourme this strange discovery, but more strange coronation, to loose that time, spend that victuall [...]
