

Elly Beinhorn as a Game Hunter (1933)

Abstract

In 1933, following a solo flight across Africa, celebrated German aviatrix Elly Beinhorn (1907–2007) posed for this photograph, which shows her as a game hunter. Comparing this photograph with the Völkerschau poster makes clear that, when it came to identity markers, whiteness trumped gender. Femininity in this photograph does not signal a threat to imagined borders but rather expresses German domination over space and nature. Beinhorn carried a weapon without appearing deviant; she stood straight, her posture was upright, and her facial expressions controlled.

Source

Source: German pilot Elly Beinhorn in on safari in the 1930s. Alamy, image number: CPJ10N. Photographer: Scherl / Süddeutsche Zeitung

Recommended Citation: Elly Beinhorn as a Game Hunter (1933), published in: German History Intersections, <<https://germanhistory-intersections.org/en/germanness/ghis:image-210>> [April 10, 2024].